World Views: Psychoanalysis, Marxism, Feminism
End-of-Term Reflection

This reflection is designed for you to consider everything you've learned in this world views course from the start of the semester until now. It's also designed for you to reflect upon what you will take from this class into your future lives. Finally, this reflection also provides you with the opportunity to provide feedback on how this class will be taught in the future. Your responses are very much appreciated.

Please make your responses as detailed as possible, and include specific examples. That is, don't just include one or two word responses, but explain your answers.

1. What are the most important ideas and skills you have developed in this course? Explain.

2. What were your favorite readings for the course? Explain.

3. What were the most useful learning activities/assignments in this class? Explain.

4. If you could make any changes to this course what would they be? Explain.

5. What are you most proud of accomplishing in this class? Explain.

6. If you could go back to the start of the term and change anything about your own work in this class, what it would be? Explain.

7. After learning about the psychoanalytic, Marxist, and feminist world views, how have you changed as a person? Consider yourself before you started the class until now. Please interpret this question as broadly as you'd like.

8. Is there anything else you would like to add?
